Patient story..!

Reaching the unreachable...

Our team of field workers came across a man while climbing the Khirhir pahad, a local hilly spot in our service area. He seemed to be worried. When our team approached him he explained his travails. He was suffering from chronic headaches. In order to seek some sort of care for this problem he needs to come down walking from the pahad and travel another 25 kilometres to reach to the nearest health centre to get his medications. Fed up with this tiresome journey he went to a Guniya (traditional healer in village). The Guniya would give him good head massage and would "extract" some worms from his head while doing the same. With recurrence of headache he got worried and wanted the worms out of his head. At the same time he rued paying thousands of rupees to Guniya without getting much relief. Our field workers measured his blood pressure, and asked him to follow up in Sangwari clinic. The story highlights the challenges people have to face in this area for getting appropriate care for even simple ailments. Our team is attempting to reach the unreachable in this area to reduce unnecessary spending and provide appropriate care to reduce suffering.
